ATTACKS DIAGNOSIS OF POPE'S DISEASE.

Condition Was 80.1 on September Troops From Jefferson Barracks, Professor Cardarelli Endeavors to Show That Leo XIII Did Not Die From Pleurisy.

Department has not as yet completed all ARGUES POINT AT LENGTH.

In Accordance With Pledge, He Says, He Waited Forty Days After Pontiff's Death Before Announcing Conclusions.

Rome, Sept. 10.-Professor Cardarelli, the eminent physician, who is a member of the Senate, published in the Rivista d'Italia to-day a long article to demonstrate that Pope Leo XIII died of cancer or tuberculous hydrothorax.

He fortifies his statement with arguments based on his own experience and that of authorities such as Trosseeau, Barth, Frankel and Zagari, to show that all the symptoms of the illness of Pope Leo XIII, as stated in official bulletins by Doctors Lapponi and Mazzoni, lead to the conclusion that the late Pope was not affected by the pleurisy or pleuropneumonia.

Professor Cardarelli affirms that from the moment bloody liquid appears in the pleura and is found through thoracentesis, especially when the fluid gathers deceitfully without pain or fever or manifest cause of pleurisy, the diagnosis of pleurisy must be excluded, and that when the liquid forms in the right pleura it usually indicates cancer or hydrothorax in aged people.

There are forms of senile pleurisy or are almost without exception of a tuberculous nature.

The declaration that the post-mortem examination confirmed the diagnosis made by Doctors Lapponi and Mazzoni, the professor declares, is not sufficient, as only circful miscroscopic examination in these cases can establish the real affection of the pleura.

The professor's statement concludes as follows:

"Hematic serum gathered deceitfully

"Hematic serum gathered deceitfully without fever, pain or cough, in an old man of 94, with diminishing strength, should have made the doctors think of should have made the doctors think of cancer of the pleura or tuberculous hydrothorax, instead of pleurisy, pleuropneumonia, or senile pulmonary hepatization, but it is impossible to make a diagnosis without having seen the patient and without precise data on the chemical nature or the composition of the liquid taken from the pleura. Faithful to a high pledge taken. I have waited forty days from the death of the Pope before making this publication."

FAITHFUL DOG STARVED AT DEAD WOMAN'S FEET.

Police Find Brooklyn Philanthropist's Body After Breaking Down Door of Her Home.

New York, Sept. 10 .- In a gloomy, oldfashioned house in Dean street, Brooklyn, the police who battered down the door have found the body of Mrs. Margaret May lying on a bed in an upper room. At her feet lay the body of a fox terrier

Until recently, the old house had been a Mecca for the poor of that quarter. Since the death of Mrs. May's husband, who was quite wealthy, the woman had distributed charity to all who applied. She had not been seen for a month, and weeds had grown high in the usually well-kept garden, where she formerly had spent much time. Finally, alarmed at her nonappearance, the neighbors noti-fied the police and the doors were broken open. The woman had been dead nearly a month, evidently from natural causes, but the little dog had never quitted his vigil and died from starvation. weeds had grown high in the usually well-

FUNERAL OF MRS. BREUQUE. Blood Poisoning From Scratch

From Shoe Brush. The funeral of Mrs. Louis E. Breuque, who died yesterday morning from blood poisoning, will take place this morning at 9 o'clock from St. Xavier's Church. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery. She was the wife of Professor Louis E. Breuque, a private tutor in French.

Three weeks ago Mrs. Breuque received a small scratch on the first finger of the right hand from a wire attached to a liquid shoe brush. At first the wound was not regarded as serious. Several days later it began to swell. Physicians were called and found that blood poisoning had developed. The poison was communicated to the jungs and pneumonia developed. Before this could be checked the patient's heart and brain became affected and she lost consciousness. All hope for her recovery was then given up.

Senator Beveridge Outlines the Administration's Plans to Indiana Bankers.

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 10.-The seventh annual convention of the Indiana Bankers' Association was addressed to-day by United States Senator Beveridge, Senator Beveridge recently returned from a visit with the President at Oyster Bay, and his positive assertions with regard to the action of the coming session of Congress were given all the more weight.

In the course of his address he said: "The coming session of Congress will not enact any radical or sweeping financial legislation. Except in great emergen cles, moderation is the word in all finan cial legislation. The stability of financial legislation, even though imperfect, is legislation, even though imperfect, is more desirable than sudden and comprehensive changes, even though those changes are toward greater perfection. "Some moderate financial legislation which will relieve the periodically occurring money stringency in the money centers is probably desired and may be enacted. But such legislation, if enacted, will be simple in its nature, and will not disturb or alarm the business interests of the country. No legislation is possible at the coming session of Congress which will radically attect our entire currency system and cause the business world to pause in our present prosperity until it is seen how such legislation is going to work."

Broadway and Locust Bilverware catalog, 4,000 illustrations, mailed free REVIEW OF THE IRON TRADE

Conditions in Striking Contrast to Those of a Year Ago. Cleveland, O., Sept. 10.-The Iron Trade Review this week says: The iron trade still presents strong co to the high-pressure conditions of 1902, yet the volume of business will compare favorably with what has been rated ordinary times. Re-with what has been rated ordinary times. Resistance to any pressure that would carry prices measurably below the present level is apparent in both pig iron and finished material, yet there is no positive assurance that the present level can be maintained.

At present Central Western furnaces are quoting under the Sil.75 Birmingham basis for No. 2 foundry, sales at Pittsburg being reported at $15.85, which would mean $11 at furnace for Southern competitors. This may have given rise to the reports of $11 Southern iron. No such sales can be traced, however, though $1.900 tons of Southern iron has been bought in the week by the leading agricultural machinery interests, and $2.300 tons by an Ohlo cast-tron pipe foundry on a basis equivalent to $11.50 Birmingham. Gray forge iron has declined further, and Pittsburg sales are reported at $15.

Steel has been sold by independent producers below the $27 Pittsburg basis, established by the pool, and a meeting of the steel billet association is expected in the near future to consider prices.
